

Happy New Year!

I hope everyone had a wonderful holiday season and that the spirit of the New Year is with all of us!

2020 marks the start of a new decade. A decade full of challenges: new technologies, migration and climate change – to name a few... In this era, it is crucial that the voice of business is being heard. Entrepreneurs have the solutions to issues that face our society. Employers' organisations can help reflect and coordinate business views to build the work and business environment of tomorrow.

DECP is off to an exciting new year to support employers' organisations in advancing economies to play their important role in shaping the future. We look ahead to a year full of action, starting with a working visit of the presidents and executive directors of East-African employers' organisations to the Netherlands early January to exchange views on bringing employers' organisations and social dialogue to a next level.

I look forward to 2020 and to the events and activities that will be featured. Let's make it a great year together!!
